

TULSA LEGIONAIRES BACK FROM MEETING

Oklahoma Delegation Took Prominent Part in National Convention of the American Legion.

The Tulsa delegates to the American Legion national convention at Minneapolis returned to Tulsa Friday morning. They were loud in their praises of the convention and were well pleased with the part played by the Oklahoma delegation. Horace H. Hagan, state commander, served on the committee that framed the new constitution for the organization. John Rogers, commander of Joe Carson's Legion, was member of the committee on resolutions. Paul Neale and Ralph Berry, both from Tulsa, served on the credentials and post activities committees, respectively. One of the most gratifying features of the convention to the Tulsa delegates was the fact that the resolution which received the greatest ovation from the convention was one concerning war department charges of so-called conscientious objection at Fort Leavenworth, was practically a verbatim copy of the Tulsa resolution passed by the state convention in October.

The Oklahoma delegation voted for O'Doller for national commander and for Indianapolis for permanent headquarters.

Plans With Roosevelt. On Friday night they had the honor of entertaining at dinner Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Josh Lee, Oklahoma's soldier poet, who created so much enthusiasm at the state convention, also scored a great hit at Minneapolis when the Oklahoma delegation acted upon a show bill in the proceedings for the purpose of getting him before the convention.

Roy Hoffman of Oklahoma City, who acted as chairman of the Oklahoma delegation of 24, was selected to act as Oklahoma's representative on the new national executive committee while Horace Hagan was selected as his alternate.

When asked Friday concerning the changes made in the organization by the new constitution, Hagan said that the preamble of the old constitution was preserved intact and many of the provisions were carried over. The new constitution emphasizes the strictly civilian nature of the American Legion and prohibits any reference to military rank at any meeting, national, state or local, of the organization.

Thieves Take Support of Widow and Family When They Steal Team

Stolen from a barn at Midway park west of this city Thursday night, two horses, the sole means of livelihood of Mrs. P. S. Brown, a widow and her five children, were being sought by county authorities. The team, driven by the widow's oldest son, 16 years of age, furnished the only income for the little family and the loss of the property works a great hardship. Sheriff James Womble telephoned many towns in this vicinity notifying the officers to be on the lookout for two horses of the following description: one 15 hands, face was not white, white spot on forehead, one ear spattered, horse weight 1,100 pounds, black spot on white spot on front knee.
